Janet H. Johnson

Janet H. Johnson served as a discussant for a panel entitled “(Con)Textual Encounters in Egypt: Bridging the Disciplinary Divide Between Archaeology and Papyrology” presented at the annual meetings of the American Institute of Archaeology and the American Papyrological Association held in Boston in January. She spent most of a week in Los Angeles in March, having been invited to give a workshop (“Women in Greco-Roman Egypt: Gender, Ethnicity, and Cultural Identity”) and lecture (“Women’s Rights in Ancient Egypt”) for Scripps College. While she was in Los Angeles, she also gave a workshop on “Women’s Legal Rights in Ancient Egypt” at University of California at Los Angeles. In October she gave a talk on “Sex, Marriage, and Property Rights (in Ancient Egypt)” for the University of Chicago Gender Studies Brown Bag Lecture Series. For the Demotic Dictionary Project and the on-line electronic readingbook of Middle Egyptian (METEOR), see separate reports.
