Arabic wasama and see Ungnad, OLZ (1908) Beiheft 2 23 and Langdon, OLZ 1909 113 n. 1), the use of šimtu in NB and in Mari as the object of šamātu, “to mark,” shows that the noun and the verb belong to the same triconsonantal root.

The differentiation of šiptu A and B is based primarily on the existence of two verbs šapātu A and B (with different vocalization) in Old Babylonian. The exact relationship of the two words remains problematical, however, and a semantic split (from a single etymon) does not seem unlikely considering the closeness of their meanings and the fact that both words occur in largely identical verbal constructions (as objects of the verbs šapātu, nadānu, and šakānu).

The rebus spelling GIŠ.PA in AKA 256 i 4 points to a pronunciation *šibtu in Assyrian texts, cf. Heb. and Aram. šbt "staff" beside špt "judgment," and compare šab-bitu. Whether this reflects a locally restricted phonetic development or implies a homophony of šiptu A (in the meaning "punishment") with šibtu "plague" in Neo-Assyrian remains an open question.

The translation "oblate" conveys the circumstances that širku's were socially, juridically, and economically bound to the temples, but were not religious personnel active in the performance of the cult. Some širku's occupied administrative posts of modest rank, others contracted for the management of large agricultural properties or herds, but the great majority were skilled craftsmen, farmhands, or common laborers. Širku's were donated to temples by their parents or (in the case of slaves) by their owners, which might entail a concomitant act of manumission, see A 32117 cited sub širkūtu. They were protected by their status not only against sale as slaves (see širkūtu) but also against other civil claims, see UCP 99 No. 36 cited sub širkūtu. The status was heritable; see BIN 1 106 and AnOr 8 47 with dupl. TCL 13 138, cited usage b-1', and YOS 6 224 cited sub širkūtu.

Writings with the ŠIM/RIK sign are most likely to be interpreted as aberrant spellings so that neither a phonetic variant šimku to širku nor a word riqqu/rikku with the same meaning, as a NB loan from Sum. rig<sub>7</sub>, needs to be assumed. Whether these spellings are errors or abbreviations for ši-rik-ki or whether this word, frequently spelled ši-rik, was further abbreviated to

rik before the ending was added, cannot be determined. The spellings ši-ra-ki.MEŠ, ši-ra-ku, ši-rak.MEŠ, etc., and even SAL ši-rak-ki.MEŠ may either reflect a plural širakū or stand for a plural šir(a) = kātu or šir(a)kātu.

In OB both šittu and sittu occur, the latter often written with the pseudologogram SI.(Ī).TUM, the normal Oakk. spelling, in which the sign SI represents initial šī. In OA, the spelling with the šī sign unequivocally represents initial š. In NB writings syllabic si-it- alternates with šit (perhaps to be read sīt).

Writings with the log. ÍB.TAK<sub>4</sub> in OB have been included here, whereas later occs. are most likely to be read riḥtu, q.v.

The meaning "sickle-sword" proposed by Mayer, UF 9 364f. is unlikely since the refs. cited usage a show that š. is not a weapon but a domestic implement. The similarity between the legal formula cited usage b and the formula referring to depositions made before patrum ša Aššur "sword of Aššur" need not imply that patru and šugariāu are synonyms. The Sum. etymology (š.u.gà.ra) proposed by Sjöberg Temple Hymns 102 to line 251 cannot explain the form or the meaning of this word.

The word probably refers to a product obtained from dates, such as sugar, or possibly a fermented drink. The rare refs. to the quantity of šugarrû use measures of capacity (3 SĪLA per gur in Dar. 382:11 and 20(?) gur in TCL 12 95:11). In kudurrus šugarrû occurs after bread, beer, meat, and vegetables. In NB rental agreements it may be a general term for an additional payment in kind or in silver. Possibly connected with šugrû (a basket), q.v.

Possibly a hybrid form derived, as the preceding takširu, from kašāru. In Izi the Akk. equivalents of 13–16 are only partially preserved, and the Akk. equivalent of line 17 is broken. The word thus is attested solely in a single, possibly faulty, provincial exemplar and may be erroneous.

sents susānu rather than ša mugirri, see Parpola, JSS 21 172. In NB texts having to do with the management of temple resources, šušānu designates a handler of animals in general, not only of horses. In the Achaem. period, the title šūšānu may designate a highly placed functionary (see mng. 1b). In other Achaem. texts (chiefly from the Murašû archive), šušānu indicates a dependent juridical status.

The reading of the sign UŠ when it denotes 60, and that of the ligature DIŠ+šū (unless abbr. for šū-šī), often confused with the sign KU, are not known.

The identification of šu'u in Assyrian texts as chick-pea is based both on the plant lists and on its occurrences in context. The sheer quantity attested in ADD 147 (about five hundred liters) indicates that šu'u was a staple of the Assyrian diet. Neo-Assyrian šu'u and abšu correspond to Babylonian ḫalkūru chick-pea and kakkū lentil (which are not attested in Assyrian). The Assyrian commodities, like the Babylonian ones, often occur together, in similar ratios (about 2:1), supporting the correspondences ḫalkūru – šu'u and kakkū – abšu. The plant remains from Nimrud (Helbaek apud Mallowan, Nimrud and Its Remains 2, p. 613ff.) indeed include lentil and chick-pea among the four species of common pulses. The other two — bitter vetch and grass pea — were limited to animal fodder in Assyria. In lit. texts šu'u may designate vetches in general.

šu'u B (šú) s.; sheep; OB, SB; wr. syll. and UDU(.NITÁ); cf. šuātu.

šu-'ú = immeru (followed by šu'ātu, q.v.) Malku V 32.

RA 38 87:2 (OB ext. prayer), and dupl. YOS 11 23, see Starr Diviner p. 30.

The refs. cited usage b and naqū mng. 3b show that the logogram UDU(.NITÁ) in Sargonid royal inscriptions could be read either immeru or šu'u. Whether this option also applies to other periods and text genres (e.g., Craig ABRT 2 19:9) remains uncertain.
