PREFACE

In the seventy years since its founding in 1924, the Epigraphic Survey has devoted a significant amount of its field time and resources to the photographic documentation of pharaonic monuments in the Theban area. The corpus of prints and negatives that is presently housed at Chicago House in Luxor may be considered the most exhaustive single resource of its kind on the temples of ancient Thebes. This publication is intended as a convenient reference tool for scholars in their efforts to locate pertinent documentation on Egyptian monuments, in particular those in the Theban area, that are represented in the Survey's archives. Although a good many of the Chicago House negatives are listed by Porter and Moss throughout the pages of their important work (1972), an additional four thousand negatives have been taken in the twenty-two years since the second edition of that work appeared, so that a more complete listing is desirable.

Compiled as a geographical listing, the Registry is organized alphabetically by site. The major site headings employed in this volume are provided in a separate list immediately following the preface. The reader will note that, for Theban temples, the sequence of numbers devised by Harold H. Nelson, the first field director of the Epigraphic Survey, is employed wherever possible to designate specific locations ("Nelson numbers"),¹ in preference to the locus designations of Porter and Moss. While the latter are in more general use among scholars worldwide, the Nelson numbers are more specific as to location and serve as the basis for planning the Epigraphic Survey's own field work. Nelson's scheme was initially developed at the Survey's first concession at Medinet Habu, prior to the publication of any numbering system for decorated temple relief, with two purposes in mind: "first, to facilitate reference to any particular scene or inscription ... ; second, as a necessary preliminary to a catalogue of the decorative material, both scenes and inscriptions, on the walls of Theban temples" (Nelson 1941, p. vii), a project of Nelson's own devising and one that he was never able to bring to completion.

In the following registry the Nelson numbers for Theban monuments are listed consecutively under each site name and are placed at the head of the listing for each site. The Nelson numbers usually begin with an abbreviated letter code that corresponds to the pertinent monument (see the List of Site Headings Used in the Registry), followed by an arabic numeral that identifies a specific relief or inscription. For reasons of space, the entries of the registry have been kept as concise as possible. The first column of the registry gives the locus description, which is then cross-referenced to a negative number² in the registry at Chicago House, followed by the size of the negative in inches (some negatives are 35 mm). It is well for the user to keep in mind that one negative can show several Nelson numbers, and that any one Nelson number can be shown on several negatives: there is not necessarily a direct correlation.

The salient guidelines for the use of Nelson's system may be summarized in the words of its inventor:

Certain large units—the vast Karnak precinct of Amon, the Karnak precinct of Mut, the Luxor temple, and Medinet Habu—have for convenience been subdivided into sections. Each section is designated by a capital letter [for example, Karnak bears letter designations A through O], and its decorations are numbered in a separate series beginning with 1. Even when, as at Karnak, scenes and inscriptions by thousands cover the surviving walls, it has thus been possible to avoid use of four-place numbers and consequent increase in size and complexity of the plans. ... Lowercase letters are added for differentiation when a single number applies to more than one decorative element. (Nelson 1941, p. vii)

[On the plans] the numbers of the reliefs in any given register have, as far as possible, been kept on the same horizontal level. If a number refers to the lowest register, in cases where more than one register is preserved, a line has been placed above the number. If it refers to the middle of three registers a line appears both above and below the number, while if the relief is in the top register a line is drawn below the number. On any particular wall the numbers have been placed in the same relative position above or below one another as are the reliefs to which they

1. For full details of the classification system and its early history, see Nelson 1941, pp. vii–viii.

2. These negative numbers are the same as those designated as "Chic. Or. Inst. photos" by Porter and Moss (1972, p. xxxii).

refer. ... The registers are shown only by the positions of the numbers in relation to one another, above or below; whether a series reads down from or down to a wall line depends merely on the direction of the lettering, which determines how the plan is to be held when in use.

The presence of an inscription in large hieroglyphs, such as often extends along the top or bottom of a decorated area without forming an integral part of the main decoration, is generally indicated by a long line in the middle of which is placed the number assigned to the inscription. An arrow at one extremity of such a line marks the beginning of the inscription, the point from which it is to be read. ... Numbers applying to decorative elements on the lower faces of architraves and on ceilings are enclosed in ovals.

Round columns have usually been distinguished from square pillars by being numbered in separate series, each series independent of that used for wall decorations (Nelson 1941, p. viii).

It should be noted that even the Nelson numbers are not foolproof. While there is a substantial advantage over the Porter and Moss system in terms of precision, some Nelson numbers do not correspond exactly to the extant divisions and scenes on a wall. And like all established numbering systems, the Nelson scheme is not directly applicable to certain types of inscribed or painted decoration: for example, material that is not incorporated into standing architecture (such as loose blocks); sites outside the Theban area; recently uncovered monuments; or even, on occasion, informal but often important reliefs and inscriptions that are to be classified as graffiti.³

If a Nelson number cannot be assigned to a photographic image, a brief written description is provided instead, in an alphabetic listing that concludes each site heading. This is the case, for example, with general architectural overviews as well as inscriptions or objects that fall outside the specific Nelson categories. General views of temples or portions thereof are likely to be found in the alphabetic section, and the reader is encouraged to consult both listings. In a very few instances the entry in the first column will read "none," especially for monuments located outside of Luxor.

The thirty-eight plates from Nelson's Key Plans, which elucidate the numbering system thoroughly, have been reprinted in reduced format at the back of this volume to provide the user with an immediate reference in convenient format. Spelling conventions and cross-references in the plate captions have been reproduced exactly as they appear in the original; thus the reader will find the older spellings "Thutmose," "Ramses," and "Epet" used in the plates, while "Thutmosis," "Ramesses," and "Op̄et" are employed in the text of this volume. The plates also retain outdated references to certain kings: "Mentuhotep III" for "Mentuhotep II" and "Ptolemy IX Euergetes II" for "Ptolemy VIII Euergetes II."

Many of the negatives maintained at Chicago House also exist in the form of duplicate negatives or prints at the Oriental Institute. It should be noted at this point that requests for prints and for permission to publish should be directed to the Archivist, The Oriental Institute Museum, 1155 East 58th Street, Chicago, Illinois 60637.

The information presented in the individual entries is primarily derived from the typewritten registration books maintained at Chicago House by a long succession of photographers since 1924. During the last seven decades a good number of discrepancies and variant usages have appeared in regard to the maintenance of the registration books. The early entries in particular are exceedingly spare, consisting only of a negative number, Nelson number, and the size of the negative. Written locus descriptions, where provided in lieu of early Nelson numbers, are often brief and cryptic. With the passage of time, other information was routinely included, such as the site name, a description of the scene, the date the negative was taken, the photographer responsible, the medium, the existence of a duplicate at the Oriental Institute, and other comments, including pertinent conservation notes. Another irregularity of the early registration books is that the sequence of negatives is not entirely consecutive. At some time in the past, certain blocks of numbers were purposely skipped and reserved for a special purpose; then the sequence may not have been fully used.

For consistency and completeness, many of the earlier, abbreviated entries in the registry have been updated in the last three years on the basis of information gleaned from other documents or written on the outside of storage boxes in which older negatives were once housed, and these data have now been incorporated as part of the formal record. An effort has also been made to standardize spelling conventions throughout the registry. Other differences in registration method—for example, the numbering systems used for individual block fragments at different sites over many years—have been necessarily maintained as recorded in the registration books, lest inadvertent errors be introduced. The reader will consequently notice a certain variety in the way the alphabetic entries have been composed.

The present publication represents only the large-format archival registry of the Survey; smaller format film negatives are not included.⁴ Two other significant corpora of photographic material have been omitted as well, since these have not yet been fully accessioned. The first is comprised of a large number of negatives, slides, and prints bequeathed to Chicago House by the late Labib Habachi in 1984 and reflects his prolific professional activities.⁵ The second is a collection of 850 glass plate negatives purchased from a local vendor in Luxor in 1987 and consists of portraits, images of monuments, and landscapes taken in Egypt from approximately 1880 to 1935.⁶

3. A good number of graffiti were in fact classified by Nelson himself. According to recent practice, undesignated graffiti are assigned the closest applicable Nelson number.

4. The large-format negatives generally include exposures measuring 4 × 5 inches and larger, although a few smaller negatives are listed. The small-format registries are maintained separately from the main listing and consist of negatives measuring 2.25 × 2.25 inches or smaller. For example, the sizable 35 mm registry is generally reserved for informal staff pictures, record photography, and development and administrative purposes.

Several other categories of negatives exist in the archival registry, but they are not included in this publication. One such category is "antiquity," a term that usually denotes portable objects obtained by excavation or by purchase, or in museum collections. Other negatives deleted from this publication include images of Harold H. Nelson's unpublished iconographic index; almost all copy prints of photographs, maps, and drawings that exist elsewhere in published form or are maintained in other archives; images of the old Chicago House on the west bank and the present Chicago House, as well as Survey staff photographs; and negatives of finished Survey drawings, which have been published.

Several other sections of the Registry deserve further explication.

Abydos: Only a single identified negative is listed in this volume. Another group of forty-one images exist in the registry, but without any written description that would identify each negative.⁷

Beit el Wali Temple: The scenes were originally designated with project numbers that have no relation to any otherwise established scheme. The project numbers have been converted in the present volume to Porter and Moss numbers, and are prefixed by "PM."

Temple of Khonsu at Karnak: One instance of nonstandard terminology was employed during the Survey's field work in the Temple of Khonsu, when all Khonsu Nelson numbers were prefixed with "Kh" in preference to the canonical "Kar M."

Saqqara: The numbers listed for the mastaba of Mereruka correspond to the room numbers published by the Sakkarah Expedition (1938), further distinguished by the cardinal directions of the walls.

Theban Tombs and Valley of the Kings: Private and royal tombs are listed consecutively by tomb number.

The publication of this volume has been made possible through a grant awarded by the Getty Grant Program of the J. Paul Getty Trust, in November 1989, for the conservation of the Epigraphic Survey's photographic archives. The grant proposal itself was a culmination of preliminary conservation efforts initiated in the archives at Chicago House during the directorship of Lanny Bell, at which time the archival holdings were reviewed for signs of deterioration and several hundred negatives were duplicated. It was clear, however, that further efforts were urgently required to monitor and salvage the deteriorating images on early nitrate films and to provide proper storage facilities on a permanent basis. In addition to the major series of large-format negatives, several hundred rolls of 35 mm film needed registration, and the personal archives of Labib Habachi, which includes approximately 12,000 prints, negatives, and slides, had to be catalogued in order to make them accessible to visiting scholars. The assistance of the Getty Grant Program was solicited in 1989 for several purposes: the continuing duplication of deteriorating negatives; the printing and identification of unregistered negatives; the continued cleaning and accessioning of the special glass plate collection; the housing of all negatives and prints in archival conditions; the transfer of the typewritten registry to a computer database; and the publication of the registry information in an accessible form. Although the outbreak of hostilities in the Persian Gulf during the 1990–1991 field season resulted in the abrupt cancellation of duplication efforts for a full year, the subsequent extension of the grant period happily coincided with the completion of the renovation of Chicago House, which made provision for archival storage. The photographic archives of the Survey are presently maintained in a three-room suite in the library building, consisting of a registrar's office, a storage room for negatives, and a separate room for the reorganized print collection. All negatives are sleeved in archival envelopes and boxes, which are in turn housed in metal cabinets. This publication now serves as an index to the resources of the main registry.

I wish to acknowledge here the contribution of many individuals who have made possible the successful completion of the conservation effort, in particular Dr. Deborah Marrow and Dr. Charles J. Meyers of the Getty Grant Program, who recognized the importance of the project and remained its enthusiastic advocates. The day-to-day supervision of the work in Luxor, the

5. For an account of the bequest, see Bell 1985, p. 15. The cleaning, printing, identification, cataloguing, and housing of the Habachi materials remain an ongoing project.

6. The acquisition is described by Bell (1987, pp. 7–8). A selection of thirty prints made from these negatives has been published as a limited collectors' edition in three portfolio volumes, for which see the Epigraphic Survey 1993. The first efforts in cleaning and cataloguing the glass plate collection were made possible by generous funds given to the Epigraphic Survey by the Friends of Chicago House tour of November 1988.

7. Eventually, each negative can be pulled and identified according to the number codes assigned by Porter and Moss. A similar case exists with the blocks of Hatshepsut's quartzite bark sanctuary, which are here listed alphabetically under Karnak Temple, but without individual designations. These can ultimately be assigned block numbers corresponding to the publication of Lacau and Chevrier (1977/79).

REGISTRY OF THE PHOTOGRAPHIC ARCHIVES

off-season planning and logistics, and the tasks of on-site duplication and printing were placed in the talented hands of photographer Susan Lezon. The truly enormous labor of transferring the typewritten records to the computer database was indomitably undertaken by Elinor Smith, volunteer archivist, who also completed most of the rehousing of negatives and the endless numbering of sleeves and boxes as well. The database for the registry itself was devised by the Survey's administrator, Dr. Peter A. Piccione, and refined by his successor, Paul Bartko, who also assisted in determining the preliminary format of the entries.⁸ The final appearance of the published Registry owes much to good advice offered by Professor Janet Johnson, John Larson, Professor William Sumner, Dr. Emily Teeter, and Professor Edward Wente.

Many other colleagues and friends must be acknowledged with grateful thanks, for their help in identifying images, in rehousing prints and negatives, in supplementary duplicating and printing, in fund-raising, and in proofing the manuscript for this volume: Sarah Bevington, Deborah and John Darnell, Christina Di Cerbo, Kathryn Dorman, Dr. Eberhard Dziobek, Diana Grodzins, James B. Heidel, Drs. Helen and Jean Jacquet, Dr. Richard Jasnow, Susan Johnson, Dr. W. Raymond Johnson, Cecile Keefe, Daniel Lanka, Carlotta Maher, Crennan Ray, Dr. Henri Riad, Charles Secchia, Thomas Van Eynde, and many others whom we collectively importuned for assistance. Dr. Thomas Holland and Thomas Urban of the Publication Office of the Oriental Institute shepherded the manuscript through the final stages of formatting and publication. For their great patience and unhesitating offers of assistance with logistical aspects of the conservation program, I am particularly grateful to Dr. Kenton Keith, Dr. Marjorie Ransom, and Dr. Frank Ward of the United States Embassy in Cairo.

A final note: the text portions of this first edition of the Registry will eventually be made available as an electronic database accessible over the Internet. An announcement of availability and directions for accessing and downloading the database will be made shortly. It is envisioned that future editions of this volume will incorporate more definitive entries and that the published Registry will expand along with its matchless resources.

KARNAK PRECINCT OF AMON
KEY PLAN

THIS INCLUDES ENTIRE AREA WITHIN GREAT TEMENOS WALL OF UNBAKED BRICK, ALSO MINOR STRUCTURES IMMEDIATELY ADJACENT TO THE INCLOSURE BUT NOT INCLUDED WITHIN THE PRECINCTS OF MUT AND MONTHU. AREA IS DIVIDED INTO SECTIONS LETTERED A TO O WITH THE EXCEPTION OF E AND J, WHICH WERE NOT USED. SECTIONS ARE DELIMITED BY HEAVY LINES.

EAST

Toward the Sanctuary —

Columns 89, 98, 119-124, and 133 had fallen prior to the excavation of the Hypostyle Hall. Of these 119-124 were re-erected by Legrain. Columns 90, 94-96, and 99-105 fell October 3, 1899, and were re-erected by Legrain. Of columns 89 and 98 only base and small portion of column below reliefs survive. Columns 130, 131, and 133 have been entirely removed. Site of columns 130 and 131 is now occupied by drainage tank. Column 96 has been re-erected in reverse position; relief "a" should face west, not east as at present. Upper portion of column 103, as now re-erected, does not belong with lower portion (possibly interchanged with No. 104). Architraves which fell with the columns in 1899 are indicated thus: - - - - -. In so far as restored they are now covered with cement and show no inscriptions.

Architraves and abaci still in situ are indicated in broken lines. Numbers within the architraves and surrounded by an oval line apply to inscriptions on lower faces of architraves. Those beside the architraves apply to inscriptions on sides. Arrows beside the architraves point toward beginnings of inscriptions. Numbers of columns follow Porter-Moss after Mariette. Letters beside columns: "a" and "b" apply to reliefs of Seti I, "b" and "c" to reliefs of Ramses II, "c" and "c'" to reliefs of Ramses IV.

Rain water at one time flooded Rooms S to Z, dissolving the earth plaster from the walls almost to the ceilings and depositing it in a solid mass on the floors. As a consequence only the extreme upper portions of the decorations are now plainly discernible on most walls, though traces, which yield more or less readily to close study, survive. Therefore the numbers on this part of the plan probably do not correspond exactly to the locations of the original scenes and inscriptions.
