PREFACE

This volume completes the epigraphic record of the Mortuary Temple of Ramses III at Medinet Habu. To the best of our knowledge no decoration on any surface of the temple now remains unaccounted for in the plates of the seven volumes except for certain minor inscriptions which, for the sake of completeness, we are including in this volume (pp. xvii–xx) in translation only. They are stereotyped inscriptions consisting commonly of the whole or parts of Ramses III's titulary, sometimes with added epithets, and they appear for the most part on the reveals of doorways, on the remains of ceilings, and on the walls of staircases. Many such inscriptions are reproduced in the plates, but most of those noted here are incomplete.

The final volume on the great temple appropriately covers the rearmost portion beginning with the Third Hypostyle Hall and proceeding through all the rooms that are accessible directly or indirectly only from the Third Hypostyle Hall. Unfortunately, inasmuch as the middle of the Temple Proper along its axis was used as a quarry, the walls of several of these rear rooms now consist of only one or two courses of blocks,[1] and but a few centimeters of the bottoms of scenes survive showing for the most part only the feet of figures of the gods and the king. Even in the case of well preserved rooms in the temple it is often difficult to determine the specific use to which they were put, and this is true of most of the rear rooms.

The Third Hypostyle Hall itself is represented by very little extant decoration. From it we publish the two pairs of granite statues flanking the middle aisle (Pl. 483), although the inscriptions on the fronts of the thrones show that they were usurped by Ramses III[2] probably from the mortuary temple of Amenophis III.

The pair of small rooms (28 and 29) north of the Third Hypostyle Hall and entered from its northeast corner also retain but little of their wall decoration. However, one would assume from the scene on the north wall of the inner room (Pl. 487) that this was the chapel of the enshrined cult standard depicted there, and to judge from the inscription (col. 1) it was a standard of Horus in one of his manifestations.

Not much more that is revealing remains of the decoration of a similar pair of small rooms (36 and 37) entered from the west end of the south wall of the Third Hypostyle Hall. It is significant that in the only scenes even partially preserved in the outer room (36) Ramses III appears in the presence of goddesses. In one case he is shown offering to a standing goddess (Pl. 502 A) and in the other being crowned with the atef-crown by an enthroned and a standing goddess (Pl. 502 B). The only scene, again only partially preserved, in the inner room (37) shows him offering to Horus son of Isis (Pl. 503). One wonders, therefore, whether this pair of rooms lying adjacent to the Mortuary Suite (Rooms 23–27), which are dedicated in a sense to Osiris and the Osirian hereafter, may not have been devoted to the cult of Isis or of Isis and her son Horus.

[1] Cf. the photographs in Uvo Hölscher, The Excavation of Medinet Habu. III. The Mortuary Temple of Ramses III. Part I ("Oriental Institute Publications" LIV [Chicago, 1941]) Pl. 22.

[2] The inscriptions on the backs (Pl. 484) are, however, original with Ramses III.

The suite of three rooms (30–32) opening off the northwest corner of the Third Hypostyle Hall, or at least the main room (31) of the three, with the nine statue niches, must have been devoted to the Ennead. The number of niches would appear to establish this beyond doubt, and Amon-Re is more than normally often referred to in the scenes in the suite as Ruler or Head of the Ennead and as the Primeval One of the Two Lands.[3] In any case, the description of the king and his attributes in the long horizontal inscription, which begins in the middle of the west wall and runs in opposite directions around the main room above the scenes and niches (Pls. 492–95), cannot be said to demand the assumption that "statues of the king occupied the niches."[4] The text says only in very general terms that the king was "the son of Amon who came forth from his body that he might illumine the estate of Amon with great monuments and that his benefactions might accrue to those (the gods) who are in [Thebes]" and that he was one "who fills the temples with the plunderings of his two arms." The innermost room (32) of the three was probably a repository, as the engaged shelf at its far end would suggest.[5] The choice of scenes in the room (Pls. 498–500) is far from routine but does not immediately suggest a common theme.

The unnumbered room with four square columns, which is situated on the axis of the temple directly behind the Third Hypostyle Hall and in which was found the red granite bark pedestal (Pl. 507 A and B), is certainly the Bark Room of the Amon-Re of Medinet Habu although unfortunately very little of the reliefs remains (Pl. 506). The same is true of the room (38) directly behind it, called here the "Holy of Holies" following Hölscher,[6] but a little more can be deduced from the bottoms of scenes on its walls (Pls. 508 A and 509 A).

Flanking the Bark Room of Amon-Re, as they should, are those of Khonsu (33) on the north and of Mut (34) on the south. The dedicatory inscriptions running horizontally beneath what is left of the scenes in the Khonsu room (Pl. 501 A and B) ascribe the room to Khonsu. No scene or dedicatory inscription survives in what must have been the Bark Room of Mut, but in the room (35) subsidiary to it Mut is twice the recipient of offerings (Pl. 504) on the one preserved wall and the deity can be identified as a goddess on the meager remains of two other walls (Pl. 505).

Not a great deal can be gathered from the reliefs in the long transverse row of seven interconnecting rooms extending the full width of the temple. The middle one (38) of the seven is the "Holy of Holies," as has been said, but the function of the three on each side of it (39–41 and 44–46) is not clear. These six rooms share with the "Holy of Holies" a mark of special treatment in that all the decoration in them is carved in bas-relief rather than in intaglio as is the rest of the temple. Such scenes as survive more or less intact in the two end rooms on each side (40–41 and 45–46) depict Amon

[3] Cf. Pls. 489, 492, and 496 A. There is also reference to what must be the "small [Ennead]" in the anteroom (Pl. 490 A).

[4] As is stated in Hölscher, op. cit. pp. 18 f.

[5] The shelf itself has been broken away, but cross-sections of its ends appear in the lower right corner of the drawing on Pl. 498 and the lower left corner of that on Pl. 499.

[6] Op. cit. pp. 19 f.

in one or another of his manifestations receiving offerings (Pls. 512–16 and 526–30) with the notable exception of the scene on the west wall of the southernmost room (46), in which the statue of Min-Kamutef is shown being "brought forth" (Vol. IV, Pl. 209). It is not correct, however, to ascribe the three northern rooms (39–41) specifically to "Amon Lord of Karnak" and the three southern rooms (44–46) to "Amon Kamutef."[7] If the scenes on the walls have any significance as an indication of the purpose of a room then the southernmost room should have been the shrine of the statue of the ithyphallic Min-Amon (Pl. 530) or Min-Kamutef (Vol. IV, Pl. 209).

The two pairs of long, narrow, transverse rooms (42–43 and 47–48), the rearmost in the temple, which are entered only by very low doorways from the first rooms on each side of the "Holy of Holies," must have been, as Hölscher judged,[8] repositories or storerooms for the "Holy of Holies" and the rooms flanking it. Again Amon in one form or another predominates, but a few others of the great gods besides the Theban Triad appear in the conventional offering scenes.

This volume contains, besides the reliefs in the rear rooms, another important body of scenes from the Temple Proper. These appear in a long series, or rather two series (Pls. 538–55 and 556–70), on the inner faces of the outer walls of the Temple Proper where they project above the roofs of the ground-floor rooms to inclose the Roof Terraces. Both series begin on the east wall, to the north (Pls. 538–39) and south (Pls. 556–57) of the First Hypostyle Hall, the roof of which was considerably higher than those of the adjacent rooms. Each series then proceeds westward along the outer walls of the temple to terminate undoubtedly with back-to-back scenes in the middle of the west wall. However, only a little of the north end of the west wall is preserved (Pls. 553–55).

The scenes themselves are of the most conventional kind, depicting the king presenting the usual offerings to a deity, often in the presence of one or two associated deities. However, the two series provide a relatively orderly geographical list of towns in Upper Egypt in which the deities concerned were resident. Sir Alan Gardiner has most recently dealt with the list and compared it with others of the sort in his publication of the Onomasticon of Amenope.[9] We have arranged the scenes in two series, each beginning on the east wall of the Roof Terraces, as they were symmetrically arranged by Ramses III's draftsmen, despite the fact that as a result part of the list then runs topographically from south to north and part from north to south. Hence Gardiner's enumeration of the scenes, following Daressy, in two series owing to the long gap on the west wall, equates with our plates thus: Gardiner's series A 5 to A 14 will be found consecutively on Plates 566 B to 570 C and his series B 0 to B 26 on Plates 555 C to 540 C in retrograde order.[10]

Two more long series of offering scenes published in this volume come not from the Temple Proper but from the exterior of the outer walls of the fore part of the temple. They form friezes of relatively small scenes above the major scenes. Those on the exterior south wall between the pylons (Pls. 571–73) were above the roof of the original palace but were partially obscured by the heightening of the roof when beam holes were let into the middle scenes.[11] To the west of the Second Pylon this frieze (Pls. 574–80) continues on a slightly smaller scale above the Temple Calendar.

The frieze on the exterior north wall (Pls. 581–86 C) does not appear between the pylons but begins at the west side of the Second Pylon and runs above the scenes of the battle against the Sea Peoples (Vol. I, Pls. 1–43).

Again all the scenes of both these friezes are the most conventional of offering scenes differing only from the generality in that the king is kneeling on a dais in every instance. They show no particular order of deities or their towns, when a town is mentioned, no apparent significance in the offering being made, no ritual sequence, and no observable connection with the scenes beneath them.

Inasmuch as this volume concludes the record of the great temple it has seemed imperative to include certain helps to enhance the usefulness of the seven volumes. To this end there appear ahead of the plates key plans (Figs. 1–16) showing the location not only of the plates in this volume but of all the plates in the seven volumes. Since the plates are numbered consecutively throughout the series from 1 to 590 only plate numbers have been inserted on the plans. The plate numbers of photographs of reliefs which are also reproduced in line drawings and the plate numbers of photographs or drawings of parts or details of scenes do not appear on the plans. Only the number of the line drawing or of the whole scene is included. Cross references appear on the plates themselves in such instances.

These key plans are in some cases ground plans of sections of the temple and, where necessary, elevations of walls or colonnades. They have been ordered in as simple and logical a manner as possible, beginning with the exterior of the temple and then proceeding from the First Pylon to the rear of the temple in the interior.

The Belegstellen to the Erman-Grapow Wörterbuch der aegyptischen Sprache do not include references to any plates of the Medinet Habu epigraphic series later than those in Volume III, and in the earlier volumes of the Belegstellen no reference is made even to the plates of Volume III. Therefore, the majority of the references to Medinet Habu texts are by means of the Berlin Zettel numbers in pointed brackets. We have deemed it necessary to supply a concordance (pp. xxi–xxxi) of all the Zettel numbers of the texts in the great temple with the respective volume, plate, and, where possible, line numbers in our publications.

In addition to those whose names appear in this volume with credit for their part in its production a word of appreciation is due various persons for otherwise unacknowledged contributions. Dr. Charles F. Nims, in addition to his customary epigraphic and photographic contributions, undertook to collect the stereotyped marginal inscriptions (pp. xvii–xx) not reproduced in the plates of the seven volumes. Dr. Nims ably assisted by Dr. Edward F. Wente also did the tedious and exacting task of preparing the concordance of the Berlin Zettel numbers with the plates of our publication of the temple. Mr. Alexander Floroff drew the sixteen key plans and inserted the numbers of all the plates of the first six volumes. Mr. James E. Knudstad inserted the plate numbers of Volume VII on Figure 16.

It is a pleasure once more to express to Mrs. Elizabeth B.

PREFACE

Hauser appreciation for insuring the accuracy and understandability of this volume as she did in the case of the two preceding volumes. Mr. Greer Allen has once again earned our thanks for the careful layout and appearance of the volume, and for the third time Mr. Edward J. Chalifoux and his staff at Photopress, Inc., have given unstintingly of their time and skill in reproducing the plates.

As we write finis to the long task of recording the reliefs of Ramses III's Mortuary Temple, we do so with a thought of those whose many hours of painstaking labor have gone into it since its inception by James Henry Breasted and Harold H. Nelson in 1924.

East wall: "[. . .] Great of Kingship; Favorite of the Two Goddesses: Rich in Jubilees like Tatenen; Horus of Gold: Rich in Years like Atum, the Sovereign Protecting Egypt and Binding Foreign Countries; King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Joyous Ruler (ḥḳ3 3w.t ỉb), Lord of the Two Lands: Usermare-Meriamon; Son of Re, of his body, his beloved, Lord of Diadems: Ramses-Hekon, beloved of Re-Harakhte, the Great God, given life like Re."

FIRST COURT

Southeast corner
The inscription of Ramses IV at the bottom of the scene shown in Vol. II, Pl. 62, from the south wall, has its conclusion at the bottom of the east wall shown in the photograph in Vol. II, Pl. 60 A: "Hekmare-Meriamon-Ramses, beloved of Amon-Re, King of the Gods, given life."

South wall, the four doorways from the Palace (counting Window of Royal Appearances as second doorway from east)
The first and third doorways: The ceilings each bear a design similar to that on the ceiling of the Window of Royal Appearances, shown in Vol. IV, Pl. 236 C.
The two west doorways:.The reveals of the jambs are similar to those of the easternmost doorway, shown in Vol. II, Pl. 66 A and C.
The westernmost doorway, strip down middle of ceiling (reading from south): "Live the Good God, Lord of the Two Lands, Possessor of a Strong Arm (nb ḫpš), Lord of Making Offerings (nb ỉr.t ỉḫ.t): Usermare-Meriamon; Son of Re, of his body, Lord of Diadems: Ramses-Hekon, [beloved of] Amon-Re, King of the Gods, Lord of Heaven, Ruler of the Ennead."

Pilasters of both colonnades
Both East Pilasters, west faces: Each bears two identical columns of hieroglyphs side by side facing south: "Horus: Mighty Bull, Great of Kingship; King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Lord of the Two Lands: Usermare-Meriamon; Son of Re, Lord of Diadems: Ramses-Hekon."
Both West Pilasters, east faces: Each bears two identical columns of hieroglyphs side by side facing south: "Horus: Mighty Bull, Great of Kingship; King of Upper and Lower Egypt: Usermare-Meriamon; Son of Re: Ramses-Hekon."

Pillars of north colonnade, north sides
Each bears two columns of hieroglyphs side by side, all facing west: "Horus: Mighty Bull, Great of Kingship; King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Lord of the Two Lands: Usermare-Meriamon; Son of Re, Lord of Diadems: Ramses-Hekon, given life like Re" (Pillars 1, 3, 5, and 7) or "given life forever" (Pillars 2, 4, and 6).

SECOND PYLON

North tower, south end, toward top
Cartouche "Ramses-Hekon" facing "beloved of Khonsu in Thebes."

North tower, staircase, both walls (reading down)
"[. . .] Ramses-Hekon; Horus of Gold: Rich in Years like Tatenen, the Sovereign Protecting Egypt and Binding Foreign Countries; King of Upper and Lower Egypt: Usermare-Meriamon; Son of Re: Ramses-Hekon, given life."

South tower, north end, tower top
End of cartouche "Ramses-Hekon."

South tower, staircase, both walls (reading down)
"[. . .] Ramses-Hekon; Horus of Gold: Rich in Years like Tatenen, the Sovereign Protecting Egypt and Binding Foreign Countries; King of Upper and Lower Egypt: Usermare-Meriamon; Son of Re: Ramses-Hekon, beloved of Amon-Re, King of the Gods."

SECOND COURT

Doorway in south wall
West reveal: "King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Lord of the Two Lands: Usermare-Meriamon; Son of Re, Lord of Diadems: Ramses-Hekon, beloved of Amon-Re."
East reveal: "King of Upper and Lower Egypt [. . .], beloved of [. . .]."

Doorway in north wall at north end of portico, both reveals
"King of Upper and Lower Egypt: Usermare-Meriamon; Son of Re: Ramses-Hekon, given life forever."

FIRST HYPOSTYLE HALL

South wall, east end, scene-divider at corner (running down left ends of the two registers shown in Vol. V, Pls. 315 A and 316)
"[Horus: Mighty Bull, Great of] Kingship; King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Lord of the Two Lands: Usermare-Meriamon; Son of Re, Lord of Diadems: Ramses-Hekon, beloved of Amon-Re, King of the Gods."

SECOND HYPOSTYLE HALL

Doorway from First Hypostyle Hall, both reveals, in alternating horizontal lines
(1) "King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Lord of the Two Lands: Usermare-Meriamon [. . .]."
(2) "Son of Re, Lord of Diadems: Ramses-Hekon [. . .]."

THIRD HYPOSTYLE HALL

South red granite dyad, front of throne (see Vol. VII, Pl. 483 A)
Left: "Live the Good God, Lord of the Two Lands: Usermare-Meriamon, beloved of Amon-Re, King of the Gods."
Middle: "Son of Re, Lord of Diadems: Ramses-Hekon, beloved of Maʿat, daughter of Re."
Right: "Live the Good God, Lord of the Two Lands: Usermare-Meriamon, beloved of Maʿat, daughter of Re, who is in (ḥry ỉb) Thebes."

North red granite dyad, front of throne (see Vol. VII, Pl. 483 B)
Left: "[. . .] beloved of [Amon-Re], King of the Gods."
Middle: "Son of Re, Lord of Diadems: Ramses-Hekon, beloved of Thoth, [Lord of] Hermopolis (Ḫmnw)."

Sandstone socles of both dyads, front of each, in one horizontal line
"Live the Horus: Mighty Bull, Great of Kingship; Son of Re: Ramses-Hekon [. . .]."
(The inscriptions on the backs of the socles as well as the dyads are shown in Vol. VII, Pl. 484.)

BARK ROOM OF AMON

Doorway from Third Hypostyle Hall, both reveals, in parallel horizontal lines in the manner of Vol. VII, Pl. 488 B
"Live the King of Upper and Lower Egypt, Lord of the Two Lands: Usermare-Meriamon; Son of Re, Lord of Diadems: Ramses-Hekon, beloved of [. . . .]."
