

DEVELOPMENT AND MEMBERSHIP

BILL COSPER, BRAD LENZ, AND EMILY SMITH

The Development and Membership team manages ISAC’s fundraising, member programming, and special events. Together, these operations sustain and expand a base of partners and supporters committed to advancing ISAC’s mission and goals.

The Development team works closely with constituents from across the organization, including senior administrative leaders, faculty, researchers, program staff, the Advisory Council, and volunteers, as well as with the University of Chicago’s Alumni Relations and Development office. In the 2023–24 academic and fiscal year, the Development team comprised the following:

- Bill Cosper, director of development
- Brad Lenz, assistant director of development and membership
- Emily Smith, development and events associate

PHILANTHROPIC SUPPORT

ISAC finished fiscal year 2023–24 in a strong financial position. The generous support of our members, donors, and partners was essential for every aspect of our operations, from field excavations, research initiatives, and cultural preservation projects to educational programs, the ISAC Museum, and more. The generosity of our Advisory Council, members, volunteers, and other donors continues to strengthen our standing as a prominent center for research and academic excellence.

Fundraising category	Fiscal year 2023–24 amount
Fundraising progress*	$4,455,335
Expendable cash	$2,735,625
Realized bequests	$802,856
Payments on multiyear pledges	$1,131,885
New pledge commitments	$50,000
New deferred gifts and documented bequests	$40,909

**Fundraising progress is the total combined dollar amount of all new gifts, memberships, multiyear pledges, and documented estate commitments received during the fiscal year.*

This year featured a number of milestone achievements. Among them was the appointment of Derek Kennet as the first Howard E. Hallengren Professor of Arabian Peninsula and Gulf States Archaeology, a position endowed by longtime ISAC supporter and Advisory Council member Howard Hallengren. Other highlights included the return to our historic work at Nippur, led by Augusta McMahon; expansion of the Jill Carlotta Maher Youth and Family Program; and preparations for James Osborne’s anticipated excavations at Turkmen-Karahöyük, among many others.

DEVELOPMENT AND MEMBERSHIP

Our fiscal year 2023–24 fundraising success was vital to all we accomplished in Chicago and at field sites and other locations. These accomplishments have laid a very solid foundation for even more success in fiscal year 2024–25. The following is just a sampling of the key initiatives our supporters will help bring to life:

- Celebrating the centennial of the Epigraphic Survey and Chicago House and readying them for their next hundred years
- Commencing new field projects and sustaining existing ones
- Presenting new Museum special exhibitions
- Continuing to grow our work with students and families both within and outside our walls
- Expanding the Chicago Center for Cultural Heritage Preservation and its projects
- Publishing the Chicago Demotic Dictionary
- Implementing technology upgrades for the Museum collections and Registration, Center for Ancient Middle Eastern Landscapes (CAMEL) lab, and Research Archives

MEMBER PROGRAMMING

This year marked a postpandemic return to dynamic member programming. From behind-the-scenes access to ISAC’s Museum and its faculty to tour and travel opportunities, these events provide members with great insight into our ancient past and what we can learn from it today.

A particular focus this year was on collaborative member programming with other local cultural organizations. We worked with the Field Museum, around its exhibition First Kings of Europe, on a two-part series of events for ISAC and Field Museum members. The first event took place at ISAC and featured four ISAC scholars—Joseph Harris, Marc Maillot, Kiersten Neumann, and Susanne Paulus—who gave rotating tours of the Museum collection based on the theme of hierarchy and inequality in human societies (fig. 1).

The second event took place at the Field Museum and included a lecture by the cocurator of First Kings of Europe, William Parkinson, followed by the opportunity to see the exhibition after the museum closed to the public.

We also hosted a collaborative member event with the Renaissance Society to bring its exhibition with Dala Nasser, which centered on ancient Lebanon, into conversation with ISAC's ancient Mesopotamian collections. ISAC and Renaissance Society members met at the Renaissance Society for a tour of Nasser's exhibition (fig. 2) and then walked over to ISAC for a lecture by Kiersten Neumann that explored such topics as mythological conceptions and practices related to natural materials and intercultural aspects of divinity, followed by a reception in the Museum galleries.

This year we hosted two Member Appreciation Days, each of which featured programming and a buffet dinner. The summer Member Appreciation Day featured a talk by Susanne Paulus and docent-led tours of the Museum. ISAC's new director, Tim Harrison, gave a talk at our winter Member Appreciation Day, and ISAC scholars were present in the galleries to talk with members about their work. These scholars included Çağlayan Bal, Maggie Geoga, Joseph Harris, Morag Kersel, Dominik Lukas, Augusta McMahon, Hervé Reculeau, Yorke Rowan, and Mehrnoush Soroush.

In conjunction with our CAMEL lab's work on ancient landscapes, we presented a monthly film series titled Movement and Landscape in Iranian Cinema. Abbas Alizadeh kindly introduced many of the films, and Pouneh Shabani-Jadidi introduced one of the films, whose title was borrowed from a poem she translated and published.

For our two special exhibitions this year, we hosted members' previews the evening before their public opening. The preview for Back to School in Babylonia featured a panel with the curatorial team moderated by lead exhibition curator Susanne Paulus. At the preview for Pioneers of the Sky: Aerial Archaeology and the Black Desert, members of ISAC's CAMEL lab shared techniques of landscape archaeology using monitors and laptops.

We hosted two popular behind-the-scenes tours of ISAC Registration, led by Helen McDonald. Additionally, Anne Flannery led members on a behind-the-scenes tour of the Museum Archives, followed by a special viewing of archival photography from ISAC's past expeditions to Persepolis. We screened a documentary about the Afghan Mobile Museum Outreach Project, which was followed by a conversational discussion with Gil Stein. We also launched a new series of virtual excavation reports, the first of which featured field director J. Brett McClain discussing the Epigraphic Survey's most recent season.

This year also marked the return to a full schedule of our Breasted Society Salons. These events, which are open to members at the Breasted Society level, feature an exclusive talk by an ISAC scholar and dinner in the ISAC director's office. This year our salons focused on Anatolia with speakers Petra Goedegebuure, Naomi Harris, Tim Harrison, James Osborne, Emily Smith, and Theo van den Hout.

We led two members' tours this year. In January, a group joined us for a special tour in Los Angeles. During the trip, we visited the Getty Villa for curator-led tours of the museum and behind-the-scenes tours of J. Paul Getty's house and the museum's conservation labs, and we also took a curator-led tour of the Norton Simon Museum. Advisory Council member Aimee Drolet Rossi and her husband Peter Rossi generously opened their home to us for a dinner and reception.

In June, ISAC members traveled with Maggie Geoga to New York. There, we visited the Metropolitan Museum of Art and the Brooklyn Museum for curatorial tours of their Egyptian collections, and we visited the Morgan Library & Museum for a tour with its curator of ancient West Asian seals and tablets. ISAC member Andrew Peters generously arranged for us to visit the Explorers Club, and Maggie Geoga gave a lecture at the Swedish-American Chamber of Commerce, which was attended by our travelers and New York-based University of Chicago alumni.

Over the past year, we published three issues of our member magazine, News & Notes, that included scholarly articles such as "Lexical Lists and the Decipherment of Cuneiform" by Marta Díaz Herrera and "Women, Gender, and Religion in Mesopotamia" by Danielle Levy.

Continuing our momentum from this year, the year ahead will feature a number of exclusive, engaging, and informative member events at ISAC and beyond. We are deeply grateful for all our members, whose support helps make our work possible.

ADVISORY COUNCIL

Through their leadership and generosity, ISAC's Advisory Council members are a crucial part of our success, and we are immensely grateful for them. Members of the Advisory Council engage with ISAC in many ways, including supporting projects financially, serving as ambassadors for ISAC, participating in tours, and providing guidance and advice.

As of June 30, 2024, ISAC Advisory Council members included:

Anthony Diamandakis, chair *	John D. Lawrence
Guity Nashat Becker	John W. McCarter Jr.
Gretel Braidwood*	Catherine Novotny
Andrea Dudek	Susan Padula
Marjorie M. Fisher*	John Otto Peters III
Joan Fortune	Rebecca Wilson Potter
Sue Geshwender	Crennan M. Ray
Byron Gregory	Aimee Drolet Rossi
Lewis Gruber*	Roberta Schaffner
Misty Gruber*	Charles N. Secchia
Howard Hallengren*	Coleman Seskind
Deborah Halpern	O.J. Sopranos*
Rex Haydon	Walter Vandaele
Janet W. Helman*	Anna M. White
Roger David Isaacs	Nicole S. Williams*
Barbara Schubeler Jillson

**Life member*

We were very sorry to lose longtime Council member Aldis Liventals in fiscal year 2023–24 (see page 7). He was a generous and deeply engaged supporter of all our work, with a particular passion for Mesopotamia and the Tablet Collection.

HONOR ROLL OF DONORS AND MEMBERS

ISAC expresses our deepest gratitude to all the generous supporters who advanced ISAC's mission and influence by making a new contribution, documented pledge, or stated commitment of $100 or more during fiscal year 2023–24 (the period from July 1, 2023, to June 30, 2024). We take great pleasure in acknowledging their dedication and publicly recognizing the profound impact of their generosity on all we do.
