The contributions of its members help the Oriental Institute to maintain expeditions in the field and to continue its research, publication and museum programs here at home. Apart from a sense of sharing in a significant enterprise, membership offers certain privileges. Members are invited to a series of lectures by prominent scholars in the field of the ancient Near East. They may also enroll in any of a number of special Saturday morning classes offered by the Institute on the culture, language, history and archaeology of the Near East. The monthly News and Notes describing the work of the staff and events of related interest, is distributed confidentially to members along with the yearly Annual Report. Members receive a 10% discount in the Institute's Museum shop, The Ssq, and may purchase official Oriental Institute publications at discount through the Publication Sales Office. During their travels in the Near East members are welcome, with prior notice, to visit the sites of Oriental Institute excavations, and they may also take archaeological tours sponsored by the Oriental Institute.

Memberships run for twelve months and may be registered in the name of both husband and wife without extra charge. Contributions are tax deductible.
